The Persecution of the Jews, Step by Step By: Mark van Kollenburg

1. Away with the Jews

Anne Frank is born in 1929 in Germany but in 1934 comes to the Netherlands to live there. Her father and mother no longer feel safe in Germany, since Adolf Hitler and his followers (Nazis) are in charge. They say that people consist of different races. Therefore they distinguish between (Arian) Germans and Jewish Germans. According to Hitler, Arian Germans are super people and they have the right to play the boss with other people. Furthermore the Jews are blamed for the poverty and unemployment in Germany. As long as it is therefore possible many Jews, among which the Frank family, flee to countries like the United States, Switzerland, China, and also the Netherlands.

2. Jews lose their jobs

Many people in Germany really believe that the Jews are guilty of their poverty, like Hitler claims. Others do not agree with the Nazis, but do not say anything. They are afraid to lose their own job or to end up in jail. In the meantime more and more Jews are losing their jobs. Jewish musicians are not allowed to perform anymore. Books by German-Jewish writers are banned and burned in the streets.

3. Jews are being assaulted

In the night of November 9 to November 10 of 1938, groups of Nazis attack German Jews by the masses. They set fire to 267 synagogues (Jewish churches), destroy 7500 stores and assault thousands of Jews; 26,000 Jews are transported to concentration camps. This horrible nights is later referred to as "Kristallnacht," because so many shop-windows are broken.

4. Jews not welcome

As of May 1940, Hitler and his soldiers occupy the Netherlands. At first Anne notices little of the persecution. But the Germans aren't sitting still. Jews had to register by the end of 1940. The occupiers want to know precisely how many Jews are in the Netherlands and where they live. Gradually notices appear on stores and cases with "Jews not welcome."

5. Jews must go to Jewish stores

More and more rules against Jews appear. They are not allowed to go to the movie theatre or the swinning pool. Anne and her girlfriends are only allowed to go to one particular ice-cream parlor in their neighborhood. And so it is that everywhere separate stores for Jews and non-Jews appear. Anne has to go to a separate school, only for Jewish children. Jews are not allowed to go to the library anymore either.

6. Jews are not allowed to move about freely anymore

Jews get a yellow star with a J on their clothes that should always be visible in public, also when they are inside, in front of their window. Later on Jews are not allowed to take the train or bus anymore either. They have to hand in their bicycles and are not allowed to go into the streets just like that. Non-Jewish Dutch people are not allowed anymore to visit the homes of Jews.

7. Jews have to go to labor camps

In the meantime Hitler has decided that all Jews in the whole of Europe must be killed. In the Netherlands Jews receive call-up notices to go and work in camps. Few Jews suspect that they are being sent directly to their death. Anne's sister Margo also receives a call-up notice. At that time the Frank family decides to go into hiding in the Secret Annex.

8. Jews are being transported to extermination camps

The German occupiers raid the Jews who have not reported to the camps. During the raid they close off streets and search neighborhoods to pick up as many Jews together as possible. All Jews are being brought to transit camp Westerbork in the province of Drenthe. In the summer of 1943, almost all Jews in the Netherlands are picked up by the German army. At that time a freight-train holding about a thousand people departs weekly from Westerbork to the concentration camps in Poland. As often as 93 times in total. The prisoners do not know that they are being transported to the extermination camps of Auschwitz, Sobibor, Teresienstadt or Bergen-Belsen. After their arrival, almost all are immediately killed in the gas chambers.

9. For millions of lews the liberation has come too late

When the Nazis are in danger of losing the war, they try to wipe out every trace of the extermination camps. The exhausted prisoners are carried off, back to Germany. Those who are too sick to go along, are shot dead. The Russians liberate Auschwitz. Otto Frank, Anne's father, is one of the few who survive the camp. It will still be months before he finds out that Anne and Margot have died.

10. A whole people is almost extirpated

Of the eleven million Jews in Europe approximately six million are killed by the Nazis during the war. Of the 140,000 Jews in the Netherlands, more than 100,000 men, women and children are killed.

" ... What, oh, what is the use of the war, why can't people live
peacefully together,
why all this destruction?... Oh why are people so crazy?"

Director's Notes

It has been an interesting experience directing The Diary of Anne Frank.

Anne Frank was one of more than over six million Jews murdered in Europe between 1933 (when Germany freely elected Adolph Hitler chancellor) and 1945. The world, perhaps rightly, has made her into an icon; a representative of all the victims of Hitler and the Third Reich. Her diary was first published in June 1947. It was ultimately translated into 60 languages and sold 55 million copies. What also contributed to Anne's place in history were the play, which opened in October 1955, the 1958 film and the revised version of the play in 1997.

Both The Diary of Anne Frank, and Anne Frank herself, has given a very human face to a horrible event that remains numbing and hard to comprehend.

This is what our ten actors have had to work with, and against; a play that has become a touchstone for a period of time and for an individual.

Our actors took on a giant task: to learn about the Holocaust -- and then in essence to set aside the enormity of it to live in the moment. To succeed they had to portray Anne and the others hiding in the attic as individuals living with daily fears; as individuals with loving hearts, broken dreams and minor squabbles. Our ten brave actors learned to balance the horrors we know today with the daily reality of a teenage girl living in anonymity and yearning for friendship and love.

I am so proud of these actors; and indeed to the entire crew and to all those who auditioned. They have approached this play with equal parts enthusiasm, reverence, audacity and humor. They have read, listened and studied and most importantly, opened their minds to all possibilities. They have met the challenges of this devastating play with professionalism.

Dr. Martin Friedman, Director
