Forum evaluates core requirements

by Neil E. Koreman

Possible changes in the core curriculum are being studied by the Faculty Forum, and the student body is invited to participate through a series of open hearings held this week.

"We're trying to solicit suggestions, ideas, and responses from the community," said Dr. John Spencer, of the Religious Studies Department. Dr. Spencer heads the Forum's Committee on Academic Policy.

"The process of review has been underway for a number of years," he said. "It's time to rethink it. Maybe the times require a different set of concerns."

The first open hearing was held yesterday afternoon. Today, a hearing will be held from 1:30 to 3 p.m. in the President's Dining Room. And tomorrow, an open hearing will be held in room 258 of the Ad Building from 8:30 to 10 a.m. Students are encouraged to submit their comments in writing to Dr. Spencer if they cannot attend these meetings.

"I hope (the student response) is good," Dr. Spencer said. "The Faculty has to be aware of other constituents in the University when making policy decisions."

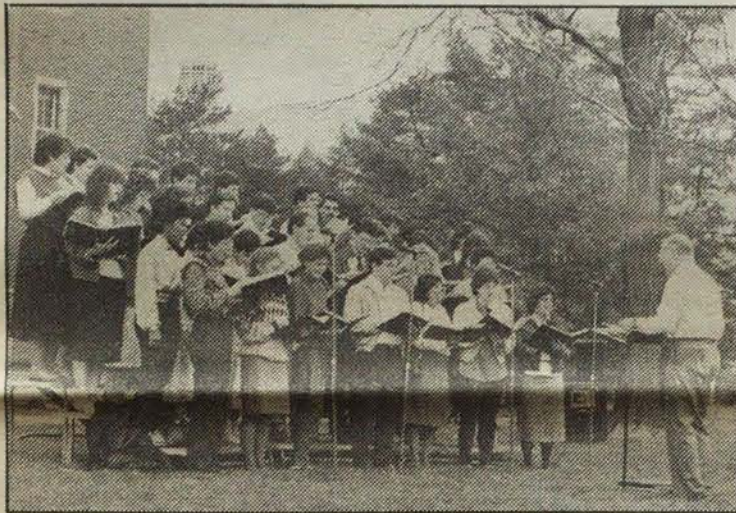

Fr. Michael Lavelle, S.J., Academic Vice President and member of the Forum, echoed Dr. Spencer's comments when asked if he thought students would participate. "I think they should, it's their curriculum," he said.

"We're in the very early stages of talking about something," said Dr.

Spencer. He stressed that no changes would be made before a proposal was developed sometime in January or February of next year.

Topics under discussion include possible literature and language proficiency requirements and a greater amount of computer literacy amongst the students.

Also under discussion are the University's Philosophy and Religion requirements. "Based on the tradition of John Carroll," said Fr. Lavelle, "these probably won't change."

State of Union Address delivered to University

by Neil E. Koreman

The Fall State of the Union Address was delivered by SU President Dave Clifford Tuesday night. A crowd of over 80 class officers, University officials and committee directors attended the reception and dinner held beforehand.

Clifford began his address (see excerpts, p. 3) by proclaiming "that the State of the Union is the best that it has ever been." He cited energetic committee directors, sound finances, and senate involvement as the factors which contributed primarily to the Union's present state.

The address commended many individuals who had worked on committees for the betterment of the Union. Clifford also praised the executive officers and the Senate for their involvement in policy decisions.

Among the advancements made by his administration, Clifford listed the record Discount Card sale which netted "almost $34,000" for the Union so far this semester. Also cited was the film series which contains "better movies that students would take the time to enjoy."

Clifford touched briefly on the subject of a SU sponsored concert. He maintained that while a large scale concert was a goal of the Union, "Never can the Union accept musical groups that cannot generate enough revenue to meet a major portion of the expenses."

Clifford announced that the Union's value had approached $80,000, and he plans to seek a faculty advisor to assist in investing and managing these funds.

The speech concluded with a plea to the Union for cooperation. "If we continue to work together, there is virtually no goal that we cannot succeed in doing."

Speakers condemn Soviets

by Paul Kantz III

The policies and problems of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev were the topics of a discussion held on campus last night.

Dr. Edward Rozek of the University of Colorado spoke on Gorbachev's policy objectives towards the United States. Drexel University professor Dr. Peter Stercho followed with a talk titled "Gorbachev's Economic Problems."

"For Gorbachev, negotiation is a war by diplomacy," asserted Rozek.

"For his opponents and potential victims, negotiation is a political LSD which generates a feeling of euphoria and gives them a false sense of security."

Rozek argued against any U.S. attempts to reach agreements with Moscow.

"The only effect any type of diplomacy will have is to erode the will to resist in the West and strengthen the Communist hope that the free world will retreat in installments," he said.

Rozek termed the recent Reykjavik summit "a trap for the United States."

He advocated a strong defense and a firm stand against communism.

"Nuclear weapons constitute the only protection the Western world has," Rozek said.

Dr. Sterchio presented another aspect of the Soviet Union, though still focusing greatly on ideology.

He said "the desire of men to be free and to earn a just wage," a desire which he claimed is stifled by communism, is the root of Gorbachev's economic difficulties.

Gorbachev is trying to improve the Soviet economy through modernization of industry. Sterchio pointed out that Gorbachev has become the first Soviet leader to openly give up on agriculture.

Last night's lectures were sponsored by JCU's Institute for Soviet and East European Studies.

Waiting list policy changed

by Brian Cassidy,
Forum Editor

In order to alleviate some of the confusion during registration, the Registrar's Office

Goss named Citiz of Year

Matthew Goss has been named University Heights' Citizen of the Year for 1986. Goss serves as the chairman of the city's Memorial Day Parade Committee.

Mayor Beryl Rothschild will present the award at a dinner to be held in JCU's Jardine Room this Saturday night.

Carroll's own Fr. Thomas P. O'Malley won the award last year, in recognition of the University's centennial.

and the Committee on Scheduling have made a few changes in the waiting list policy.

Beginning this Spring, students will not be able to add their names to the waiting list for any class after January 9, 1987.

After the second day of classes, students on the final waiting list will not be able to get into that class.

The current policy has caused some problems.

"A lot of people get into courses from the waiting list and do not realize it," Registrar Kathleen DiFranco said. "If a student decides he doesn't want to stay on the waiting list, or if he wants to change it with another class, he should notify somebody at the Student Service Center."

The department chairman is the only person who can authorize changes in seating capacity. The Registrar's Office must be notified of any changes by the end of the first week of classes.

Early registration for Spring classes begins Monday, November 10 and runs through Wednesday, December 3. This is open to all currently enrolled undergraduate students, graduate students, and evening students.

Open registration for all students begins Monday, December 8 and ends January 16, 1987.

The last day for course changes and late registration is January 23, 1987, the end of the first week of classes.

Use your vote

This Tuesday is a very important day for everyone who considers themselves American. It is election day, a chance for the people of this country to state their views and choose their leadership.

It is important to realize your position in the world. You are not merely a student, you are a member of a larger society. This society is one that regulates your actions with its laws, one that shapes your future with its policies.

Citizens are regularly dissatisfied with their leadership. If this is the case, they have the democratic right to change it. If the electorate is satisfied, they should say so with their votes. Either way, public involvement is the only way to regulate this country's leadership.

The vote that you are entitled to is far too often forgone by our age group. This is truly a shame because the young voters are affected in the same manner as their elders. Don't let someone else choose for you, go cast your own vote.

This year, three local House Districts and a seat in the Senate will be decided by Ohio voters. These positions are not to be taken lightly. They entail great responsibility and involvement. Choose the course of your future, and vote for the candidate you think best.

The consequence of your vote cannot be understressed. It does make a difference, and one that you are obligated to state. The right to vote entails the responsibility to do so; make sure your voice is heard this Tuesday.

Core curriculum

Core requirements are something that effects every student. They are intended to round out the Carroll graduate, giving the individual sensibility in fields that are not included in the major. The core classes educate the Carroll student beyond what they "need to know."

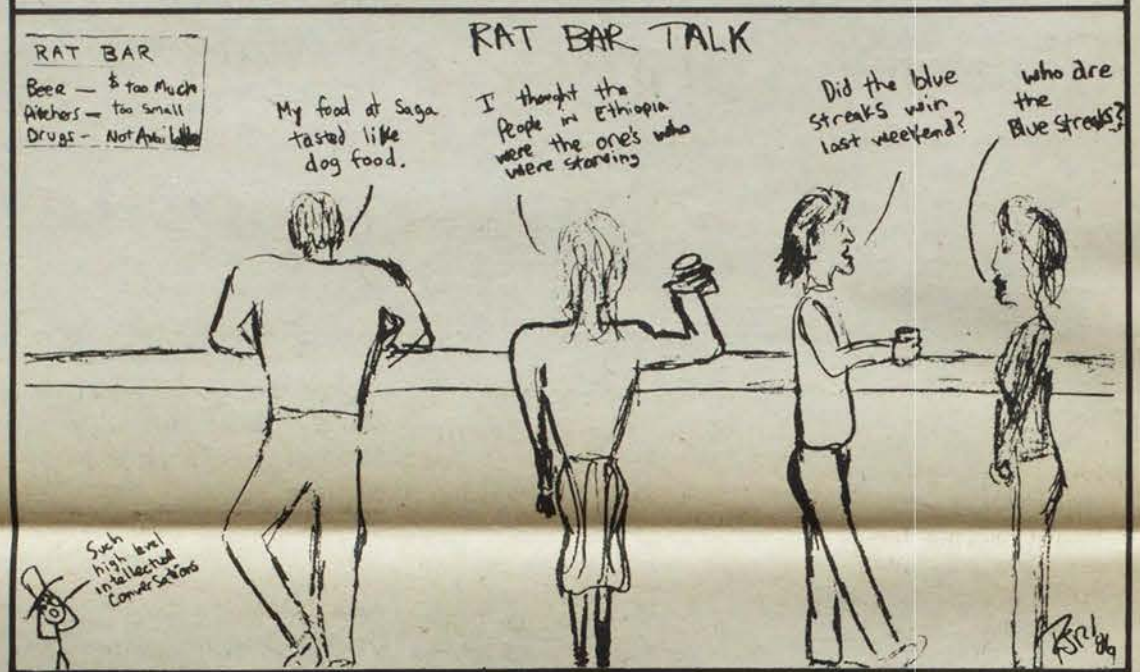

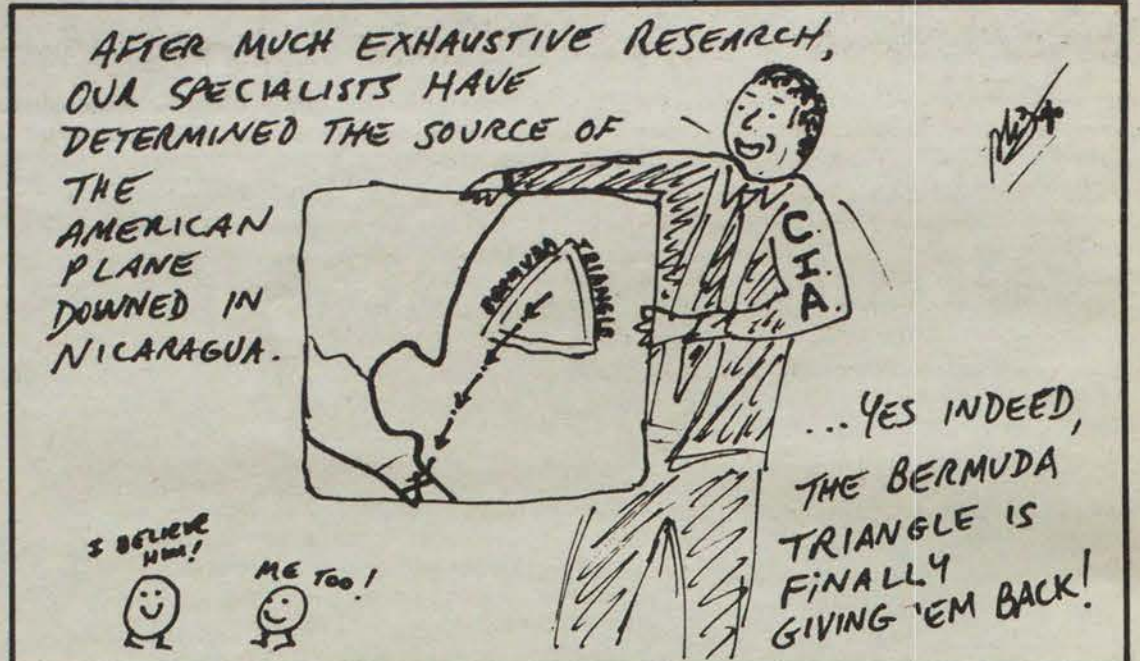

Currently, there is some discussion about changing the core (see article p. 1). The student body has been invited to participate in the review process, and should not pass up this opportunity.

If you are dissatisfied with the number of Philosophy courses you have to take, write to the Committee on Academic Policy and tell them. If you think Speech is ridiculous, let them know. Whatever weaknesses appear in your core should be disclosed to the committee.

On the other hand, if you think Religion requirements are good, let people know. What about competency testing to place students out of core courses? Should the students have some level of computer literacy when they graduate?

These are all questions that the committee will be examining, questions which the student body must help answer. For who is more directly involved in a discussion regarding the core than the students?

Every student has some sort of problem with the core requirements. Whether or not they are legitimate gripes is up to the committee's discretion. Even so, all Carroll students have a right to voice their opinions on the core classes, and the opportunity has presented itself. Don't let it pass by.

Take a Stand

Dear Sir,

Fall is once again upon us, and with that comes the duty of every United States citizen of age to vote.

Voting is not a privilege, it is a duty that every person who is concerned about his or her well-being must perform on November 4.

It is on that day when candidates will be asking for your support at the polls. But is it really the candidates asking for your support, or you asking them for their support? I propose the latter.

You are going to feel the effects of a particular line of policy-making. Thus, it is the private individual who must stand up and vote in favor of candidates who will align closely with his political needs.

As President Woodrow Wilson once cleverly asserted, the basic need of the government is to gain input from the voting public. Today candidates are calling people to the polls. America needs individual voters to enhance their political process.

Remember that the United States is government for the people, by the people. Citizens have the right to elect any person into office that they choose. The democratic process guarantees that the rule of the majority will prevail.

Thomas Jefferson said in a speech in April of 1793, "I consider the people who constitute a society or nation as the source for all authority in that nation." Realizing the trust on which Jefferson made that distinguished statement, he has reminded the people of the United States that they are indeed the heart and soul of this great nation. Only when Americans go to the 'State of the Union' excerpts

President proclaims Student Union 'best ever'

In discussing the Union, I would like to expound on three areas which are in sound condition, yet merit additional work. These are fiscal responsibility, departmental excellence, and executive and senate involvement.

I am especially proud of the work done by Pat Carney and Matt Parnell, Co-directors of Discount Cards. Discount card revenues climbed to a still growing peak of almost $34,000.

I am pleased with Tom Maggio and Garrett Peters in their Directorship of Film Series. The number of films has increased to thirty, and expenditures decreased; thus demonstrating the Union's commitment to providing non-alcoholic, quality entertainment for the John Carroll community.

The Directorship of Information Services under Kelly Morrow will be announcing changes in the publicity of events so that both commuter and residents will be better informed.

The Directors of Welcome Back Week, Lisa Clifford, Beth Michalak, and Karen Lowrey, have done commendable jobs.

Peter Anthony has committed the unprecedented act of being chairman of the Elections Committee, director of the gameroom, and a member of the review committee.

As a Union we must show we have the skills to lead, to organize, to create and to provide the best we can for our electorate. I urge each director not to be satisfied with his or her efforts and strive to improve their department.

It is appropriate that I recognize the four determined individuals that make the Executive Board complete. Next to them, the Senate invokes the greatest amount of policy-making input. I have been extremely proud of the senate in recent weeks because of the strength that they have shown.

Among many concerns, fiscal responsibility ranks first. Our primary fiscal concern is to be solvent. I advocate that a portion of the money be used thriftily to sponsor activities for the students. I also advocate the continued investment of a portion of the funds so that the Student Union will remain solvent.

The Student Union's equity is approaching $80,000. For this reason I shall call for discussions with the appropriate officials in the business world to aid in finding the best way to invest this money for a maximum yield. Also, I shall search for an additional faculty advisor to help in the management of the funds.

The Union's financial picture is the best it's ever been. We've all worked hard to get to where we are today. If we continue to work together there is virtually no goal that we cannot succeed in doing. Together we can make the Union not only the wealthiest ever but also the strongest ever.

Rhodes running strong in gubernatorial race

by Joseph J. Ranyak

Each of the candidates of Ohio deserves an equal opportunity to voice their views to the Carroll community.

This article is aimed at giving the students the view of former Governor James A. Rhodes in order to rebut the comments made in the interview The Carroll News conducted with Governor Richard F. Celeste.

Former Governor James A. Rhodes is running again for the position of Governor of Ohio against incumbent Governor Dick Celeste. Rhodes is going for his fifth term as governor, having completed four terms in that capacity (1962-70 and 1974-82).

During his tenure as Governor of Ohio, Rhodes has done many things to make Ohio one of the best states in the nation.

He improved universities in Ohio, created Cleveland State University and improved Ohio State, Akron, and other state schools. He also instituted the "Golden Buckeye Card" which gave discounts on many items to Ohio's senior citizens.

Business flourished in Rhodes' administration until Jimmy Carter became President. During these years Ohio, along with many other industrial states, lost business, workers, and jobs. Unemployment went up, but this was the norm in most states during the Carter regime.

As things were getting better under President Reagan, the elections of 1982 came around. Rhodes could not run again, however, because he wasn't allowed to by Ohio's constitution.

"... Rhodes has done many things to make Ohio one of the best states in the nation."

Gov. Celeste has reaped the benefits of the Reagan administration. Things have gone well in Ohio, but not as good as they could have.

Celeste had his problems after raising taxes and having to refund money to people because he underestimated the economic recovery of America under Reagan. He also had problems with one of his supporters, Marvin Warner, who owned many savings & loans which folded.

Rhodes believes that the drinking age should be raised to 21, citing the need for the federal highway funds. He also wants "to see my grandchildren reach 21."

Regarding the proposed debate, Rhodes said that he will agree to a debate at Marvin Warner's farm. It is Celeste who said that he would meet Rhodes anywhere — and at anytime, but he has not agreed to it.

Also, Rhodes supporters cannot believe that Celeste takes credit for bringing the Rock-N-Roll Hall of Fame to Cleveland when it was the citizens of Cleveland and Mayor George Voinovich who did all the work. Celeste just took the credit.

It is imperative that you know the issues and candidates. If you are able to vote in Ohio, do so. Hopefully, this article has helped you along to make your decision for the 1986 gubernatorial race.

Letters to the Editor polls can the words of the insightful Jefferson ring true.

Hold your future dear to yourself, control and take charge of it. Do not allow others to wend their way into your future by accepting policies without voicing your choice.

Consider this fact. It is said that we are the leaders of tomorrow, but tomorrow never comes. That is why you must go to the polls November 4 and become a leader today. It is your future. Take a stand.

Sincerely,
Tim Kelly

Celebrezze Support

Dear Sir,

Election Day is almost upon us. In past elections, the aspect I've found most amusing is all of the political mud-slinging which takes place.

However, this year I cannot laugh. The Plain Dealer, Cleveland's only newspaper, has taken upon itself to encourage the ouster of the incumbent Chief Justice, Frank Celebrezze.

Inflammatory headlines and subsequent demeaning articles have bordered on libel and slander. Serious accusations are made against him, but no corroborating evidence is proffered. The journalistic who, what, why, when and where are strangely absent.

It is admirable that The Plain Dealer shows concern for the citizens contemplating whom they should elect to public office. It is not admirable that the paper has waited until one month before the elections to run its series of articles impugning the integrity of the Chief Justice of our state's Supreme Court.

The Plain Dealer seems bent on casting a shadow upon our state's judicial system — yet has not printed a shred of hard evidence. By taking such a stance, The Plain Dealer has insulted the intelligence of the workers, insulted the City of Cleveland, and insulted all Italian-Americans.

Such manipulating by innuendo again raises the concern whether a major city can be kept properly informed when served by only one newspaper.

I hope the voters of this state choose to act after an examination of both candidates' records — and not merely accede to how The Plain Dealer tells us to vote.

Sincerely,
Jay Azzarello
Political Science Major

Age: 48
Education: Yale University, Magna Cum Laude; Ohio's Rhodes Scholar, Oxford University.

Occupation: Governor

Celeste has served Ohio's Lieutenant Governor and as Director of the Peace Corps. He lists stable funding for schools and universities and a general improvement of the environment amongst his priorities for Ohio's state government.

James A. Rhodes

Age: 77
Education: Springfield HS, attended Ohio State University
Occupation: Development

Rhodes served four terms as Governor of Ohio, as Auditor of the State and Mayor of Columbus. He lists cutting non-essential spending and restoring Ohio's business climate as his priorities for the state of Ohio.

The race for Governor is one students should pay particular attention to. Columbus divies out state funds to educators. The policies set by the Governor affect this state's future, something all young voters should be concerned with.

Presented here is an election guide for the Carroll community. The candidates for U.S. Senate, the U.S. House of Representatives and Governor of Ohio are listed.

The guide is compiled from the League of Women Voter's Non-partisan Voting Guide and the Cleveland Plain Dealer. It is merely an attempt to present the candidates for office, and not to influence the students' vote.

The polls will be open from 6:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, November 4. Make sure you exercise your right to vote, and do so responsibly.

Video yearbook is watching you ...

by Madeleine Thomey

Catch the wave! No, I don't mean Coke. I'm talking about the new video-yearbook! You haven't heard of it yet?

The video-yearbook will be a thirty-minute long video conglomerate of all social activities of the 86/87 school year. Editor Mark Trainor expects at least part of the video to be set to music. Orders will be taken this semester for the VHS cassettes, although no price has yet been determined.

Funded by the Student Union, the yearbook, with the help of Colleen Connery, Pat Ryan, and approximately fifteen other people, has already begun filming and plans to have a raw footage show within the next few weeks. The purpose of the show is to get suggestions as to which clips to include in the final tape, and to encourage student interest.

The video-yearbook staff, along with moderator Dr. Alan Stephenson, meets every Sunday at noon in the television studio. So if you are interested in joining, you know where to show up. Trainor highly recommends the experience, saying, "You'll learn more out in the field than you ever will in the classroom."

Any organizations who would like one of their main events videotaped may submit a request to Trainor in the Student Union office. He would also appreciate receiving a schedule of projects or events in case it is decided that they would provide good footage for the production. Trainor stresses the importance of receiving a schedule, because if the staff is not aware of what is going on, those things will not be included in the final product.

So catch the wave and get involved in what Mark Trainor calls "the yearbook of the future!"

If you're not too hungover ...

by Tim Kelley

University Circle offers students the opportunity to relax in an atmosphere of mankind's greatest achievements. The area is stocked with museums, gardens, parks, and last, but not least, people from all walks of life. These conditions promise an afternoon of observing the human condition as never before.

First, let us turn our attention to the Natural History Museum. This showcase depicts the ascent of man through the ages, ranging from his most primitive existence to his most advanced technologies. The museum also houses exhibits of fossilized animals of eras past and the habits of those living today.

But the University Circle experience doesn't end with dinosaur bones, that would be too easy. Go across the street and wend your way through the halls of the Cleveland Art Museum.

Wander leisurely through the galleries and enjoy those that lived long ago, while experiencing a sensual exploration of the prolific artists of today. In a single short visit to the Art Museum, one can travel from darkest Africa to the ambiguity of modern America. There is no need for a plane ticket; the only requirement is an imagination and an open mind. Even those of us who are simple minded will find our curiosities aroused.

After exploring the new worlds the Art Museum has to offer, go out the back door and relax in Wade Park. Wade Park offers visitors green lawns, luscious trees and a small lake with an air of serenity. It is frequented by men and women from all walks of life: Case students, photographers seeking that elusive shot, and artists handling their wares. Try out Wade Park, you'll walk away with a refreshing feeling of escape from the routine.

Kulas production in full swing

'Inherit the Wind' more than just history

by Brian Stiltner

The headlines make it clear that the battle is not yet over.

It has raged on ever since Charles Darwin published his "Origin of Species" in 1859. Biblical fundamentalists took strong exception to the theory of evolution then, and still do today.

In Tennessee this summer, several parents filed suit against the school board to remove evolutionary teaching and "secular humanist" books from the classroom. A similar case is pending in Alabama, while in Pennsylvania a high school teacher has been suspended for teaching creationism in a science class.

The questions at stake are grave ones: the relationship of religion and science, freedom in education and religion, censorship, and the problem of church and state.

John Carroll's production of "Inherit the Wind" by Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee tackles these issues head-on.

The play, which opens Friday, November 7, does not deal merely with the 1925

Scopes Monkey Trial, at which a grade school teacher in Tennessee was tried for teaching evolution in violation of state law.

"The most exciting thing about this play is that it is not history," says Matt Smith, who plays the school teacher Bertram Cates. "It is extremely current, contemporary, now."

"Inherit the Wind" is notable for many other reasons. It marks the first time a university production has played in Kulas Auditorium in 15 years. It also features Fr. Thomas O'Malley, Dean Richard McNally, and Jack Riley, a John Carroll alumnus formerly on "The Bob Newhart Show."

Actors and actresses of all ages and walks of life participate in the play — children, students, parents, faculty and administrators. The actors express excitement about working in such an eclectic and talented group.

Undoubtedly, the most significant aspect of this play is the issues at stake and the way in which both the characters and the audience engage them.

Maria Livers, the production's dramaturg, comments, "In much the same way as the trial itself brought many different people together, so is this play an opportunity for all the university to come together to share an experience which has great religious, social, and emotional impact upon us all."

"Inherit the Wind" plays November 7, 8, 14, 15 at 8 p.m. with a November 9 matinee at 2 p.m. Tickets are on sale at the box office in the Administration building.

"Crocodile Dundee" at Loew's Cedar Center

When going to view the much talked about "Crocodile Dundee" this week, I broke two cardinal rules of illuminati critics.

My first mistake was in trifling with a PG-13 movie. (PG stands for Pansy Garbage.) The second mistake involved not strengthening myself by consuming enough frothy potables beforehand. Quel dommage!

The best part of this film was the trailer for "Star Trek IV."

The only other appealing component of this movie is Paul Hogan, who portrays the title character — a casually comedic white aborigine from the Outback of Australia. Hogan's frisky wit brings the flick to the level of tolerable. A plot, of course, is almost non-existent.

Dundee is a hyped-up folk hero who has conquered the wilds of Australia. A saucy journalist from the Big Apple is doing a feature story on Dundee. She persuades him to return with her to NYC so he can see what a real jungle is like.

The rest of the flick is a series of yawnful gags which lead to the predictable climax of inevitable "I luv you's" between the Croc and the Apple-saucy. She's only saucy from the waist up, by the way.

My friend Ficus suggested this movie. I rewarded him with an abdominal suplex (bigtime wrestling lingo). $

Lenhart picked as new JCU swim coach

Matt Lenhart, a 26-year-old graduate of Bowling Green University, has been named John Carroll's new head swim coach.

The appointment was made by Athletic Director Tony DeCarlo this week. Lenhart replaces Gordon Brown, who resigned in August to accept a position at Ludington High School in Michigan.

Lenhart will coach the men's and women's swim teams, both of which began practice this week. He inherits a women's team which is the defending Presidents' Athletic Conference champion and a men's squad which finished third in the PAC in 1985-86. In addition to coaching, Lenhart will also assume teaching duties.

Prior to his appointment at Carroll, Lenhart spent six months in Saudi Arabia as the Aquatic Director and Swim Coach for the United States Sports Academy. He has also taught and coached at his alma mater.

A 1983 graduate of Bowling Green, Lenhart was a four-year letterman on the Falcon swim team as well as captain of the squad his senior year. He still holds six varsity records at the school.

Cross Country loses footing

by Tom Lynch

The John Carroll men's and women's cross country teams competed in the Mt. Union Invitational, in Alliance, Ohio over this past weekend.

The Blue Streaks performed fairly well despite the cold, rainy day and the muddy course. The John Carroll men's team finished seventh but again their top three runners managed to better their times over last week.

Rich Lynch led the Blue Streak men with a time of 28:54, 39th overall. Rich was followed by Jim Schweikert, who ran sub 30:00 for the five mile course, and Pat Meyers.

The Lady Blue Streaks ran well and Peggy Zusiak's 6th place finish was the highlight of their match.

Both teams are now preparing for the P.A.C. meet this Friday at Grove City. The Blue Streak men will need especially strong performances out of their #4 and #5 runners to finish fourth over Bethany. However, on the brighter side, at the Mt. Union Invitational, John Carroll was defeating the Bethany team on points before Bethany was forced to withdraw for not having enough runners finish.

The Lady Blue Streaks will have to be healthy and running well to finish fourth in the PAC, but the future is bright, if not for this year, then for next year.

Gators win another one

by Tony Battaglia

Continuing their winning ways last Saturday at home, the Green Gators pummeled the Ashland College Rugby Club 38-0.

The "A" Gators played hard throughout their match, attended by a large Parents Weekend crowd.

Leading the attack for the "A" Gators were Brion Walters, with three tries, and Pat Jennings with two. Roberto "Bedo" Aldave also contributed with his first score of the season.

In the second match, the "B" team ended a perfect day with a 3-0 win over Ashland's "B" squad.

The win raises the Gators' record to 3-1 with two matches remaining. Wheeling College, away, November 1 and Penn State, which promises to be the toughest match of the season, November 8.

Sports Today

by Michael Pasternak

I have had the pleasure of interviewing channel five Sports Director, Nev Chandler. To no surprise, the sport discussed was basketball — specifically the Cavs.

I asked Mr. Chandler about the Cav's upcoming season and he feels that the nature of this team will respond to the coaching techniques of Lenny Wilkens. Specifically, he mentioned John Bagley and Mel Turpin.

Wilkens is the type of coach who is a teacher, motivates his players with a pat on the back and subscribes to a code of loyalty to his players. These attributes should settle down the likes of Bagley and Turpin.

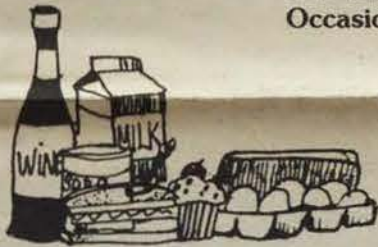

Wilkens was a point guard on a championship team and Bagley more easily understands his coaches instructions because of this. Turpin should also respond to the congenial demeanor of Wilkens.

Mr. Chandler had some interesting explanations for the Cav's active front office. Coming off of a terrible season, with a few bright spots, the pressure was on the organization to take on a "do something attitude" and they did. They traded Roy Hinson to Philadelphia for the rights to the number one draft choice. The Cav's used this choice to select Brad Dougherty. Chandler feels this was more of a P.R. ploy than a trade for talent. The next move, he feels, was one of the best in the history of the franchise — the drafting and eventual signing of Ron Harper. He feels that Harper will be the most talented person to put on a Cav's uniform ever!

Gridders corral Bethany Bisons, 35-21

by Neil E. Koreman

The Blue Streak gridgers tacked a second PAC win onto their record last Saturday, buffaloing the Bethany Bisons 35-21.

The Streaks exploded early in the game, when Sophomore tailback Tom Curtis returned a punt 78 yards for a touchdown with 11:28 still left to play in the first quarter. Curtis scored again on a 2-yard run with 4:37 left, leaving the score at 14-0 in favor of the Streaks at the end of the quarter.

"We executed our plays really well," said Curtis. And it was just such a play that gave him his third touchdown on a 10-yard run at 10:32 in the second quarter.

Carroll's defense held the Bisons scoreless throughout the first half, sacking Bethany's Tracey Finchum for a recovery, and forcing the Bisons to punt four times. "It was a great game," said Dan Brogan, Junior defensive back. "We had some breakdown in the third, but we stopped them in the fourth. There was some miscoverage, and we made sure it didn't happen again."

The third quarter was Bethany's best. The Bisons turned on their passing game and scored two touchdowns.

The first came on a 2-yard run by full back Dean Piskor at 5:32 in the quarter. Finchum's 11-yard pass to Bison Doug Marshall gave Bethany their second TD at 1:38 in the third.

"Bethany had a very good third quarter against us," said Head Coach Frank Amato. "But our offense was able to match them. We forced them to go the long way for a score."

The Streaks matched the Bisons tooth and nail. Chris Ambrosio, Junior tailback, ran 21 yards for a touchdown in the third, and quarterback Chris Stablein waltzed around the Bison's defense in the fourth for a 3-yard touchdown.

How did it feel? "It was great," said Stablein.

The Bisons managed to score again in the fourth, on a 23-yard pass from Finchum to running back Tim Williams. But it was too late to save the game, and the Bisons fell to a final score of 35-21 in favor of JCU.

"Offensively we put it together," said Amato. "Our rushing stats are becoming respectable again, and the defense held when it was supposed to hold."

"Next week's game will be a tough one," he continued. "Grove City is a very big, very physical football team. But I think we've got a point to prove. We were picked last in the PAC. Nobody likes to be written off. It's payback time."

The Streaks will travel to Grove City this Saturday. Kickoff is at 1:30 p.m.

"We'll be 4-2 if we win the next two games," said Curtis. "We'll be tied for second place in the PAC."

Spikers ace Carnegie-Mellon

by Chris Wenzler

If you remember Buddy Biancalana, you will recall that he was a backup infielder for the Kansas City Royals last year. When the Royals made the playoffs, he was forced into duty because of an injury to a starter. This bit-part player turned into a hero when he gave that much needed spark to his team. Needless to say, Biancalana was a major reason the Royals won the World Series last year. The moral of this story is that when you get the chance, make the best of it.

What does this have to do with volleyball? Whether or not they have heard of Bian-calana, Jessica McKendry and Paula Whelan have certainly followed his example.

In a recent match with CMU, the Blue Streaks avenged an earlier loss to the Tartans. In game one the only bright spot was the return of senior Lisa Dwyer, who had been injured all year. But soon there were many bright spots as Marti Cutarelli and Mary Ann Montagne helped the Streaks pull out a 15-12 victory.

Game two was full of see-saw action. But after holding a 9-8 lead, the see-saw tilted in favor of Carnegie-Mellon as the Tartans took a 12-9 advantage. It could have been worse if it weren't for two crucial saves made by McKendry. "I just did what I had to do," said a modest McKendry. JCU stormed back to a 12-12 tie when Whelan came off of the bench to save a point and score once, finally putting Carroll into the lead. The Blue Streaks eventually won 15-13.

In the third game, the spikers pulled away with their strongest play of the match winning 15-7 and thus adding a notch to their win column.

Their next game will be on November 4 against Grove City and Geneva at home.

JCU defender breaks up a Bethany pass play in Saturdays victory over the Bisons.
