UHPD and campus security summoned, again

Dolan Hall sees second incident in less than a month

Melissa Tilt

A woman was allegedly assaulted outside Dolan Hall on Saturday, Oct. 28 by a young man who jumped from behind the back door of Dolan and pinned her against the right side of the back for four days of assault.

This is the second incident reported to campus security and University Heights Police Department (UHPD) within the past month. According to campus police, a rape was reported by a UH student, campus security during the time on Oct. 22, and UHPD was notified. She said she was 26, and she was allegedly forced by her (name removed) to her back and back from what is known as the corner. She also said she was arrested by GEM on Oct. 22 and was not available for comment.

Farrell said there were no witnesses to the assault. "UHPD is taking all the necessary measures to make the student feel safe and to find the perpetrator," he said.

"The investigation is ongoing. We need to know all the details," said Farrell. "We are working with the physical evidence, and we are trying to get as much information as possible."

"We are taking all necessary steps to ensure the safety of the student and the campus community," said Farrell. "We are also working with the University Heights Police Department to ensure a safe environment for all students."
Carillon offers staff loss
Yearbook staff lacks upperclassmen support

Joe Whitty

This year's Carillon staff has been depleted by a serious and significant personnel problem that has affected the newspaper's ability to produce a quality product. Several Carillon editors and staff members have resigned, leaving the remaining staff with the challenging task of maintaining the newspaper's standards and deadlines.

"The loss of these valued contributors has been devastating to the staff," said Rob Rohal, the editor-in-chief. "It has been a difficult year for everyone involved, but we are determined to continue producing the best news coverage possible under these circumstances."

Several Carillon members who have resigned said they were unequipped to handle the increased workload and responsibilities. Others cited pressures from upperclassmen and increased demands for coverage.

"I think the Carillon staff is under tremendous pressure to perform," said Jennifer Yeates, a former Carillon editor. "The staff members who are still here are doing the best they can, but it's not enough."

Despite these challenges, the Carillon staff is committed to producing a quality product. "We are committed to maintaining the Carillon's tradition of excellence," said Rohal. "We will work hard to ensure that the newspaper continues to be a valuable resource for the students and the community."

"The Carillon staff is dedicated to providing accurate and informative reporting," said Yeates. "We will continue to work hard to fulfill our responsibilities and uphold the newspaper's standards."

The Carillon staff would like to thank the students and community for their support and encouragement. "We appreciate your understanding and support," said Yeates. "We will continue to strive for excellence and to serve the students and the community."

JCU's Catholicism questioned
Letter to the editor sparks student debate

Joe Whitty

The student Union has issued a statement condemning a letter to the editor that criticized the University's Catholicism. The statement was released in response to a letter written by a student who questioned the University's commitment to Catholic values.

"The letter is a disrespectful and negative depiction of our University," said Kevin Burrell, the student Union president. "It is important for us to promote a positive image of the University and its values."

Several students have voiced their support for the student Union's stance. "I am proud to be a member of this University," said Jennifer McLaughlin, a junior. "I believe in the values and mission of the University, and I am committed to supporting and upholding them."

The University has taken steps to address the letter's concerns. "We have met with the author of the letter to discuss their concerns," said Burrell. "We are committed to addressing and resolving any issues that may arise.

We hope to see you at the carnival! It promises to be a fun and exciting event for everyone.
Carillon suffers staff loss Yearbook staff lacks upperclassmen support

Joe Whitney

This year’s Carillon staff has faced many challenges, many of them stemming from the current Upperclassmen’s Committee. This year, the yearbook has lost several staff members who have left the Carillon committee. The yearbook staff is left with a smaller pool of talented students.

Several Carillon staff members have also left the Upperclassmen’s Committee. At the beginning of this year, several staff members left the Upperclassmen’s Committee due to the work involved with the committee.

Several Carillon staff members who have left have moved on to other opportunities at the university, such as internships, jobs, and graduate school.

The Carillon is a student-run publication that relies on the hard work of its staff members. The loss of these staff members will affect the quality and quantity of the yearbook.

The Carillon staff is currently working on the yearbook and will continue to do so despite the loss of these staff members.

JCU promotes Alcohol Awareness

Carillon Spring

JCU’s Office of Alcohol Awareness Collaborative is now accepting applications for the 2006-2007 academic year. The office is looking for students who are interested in promoting awareness about the dangers of alcohol abuse.

The alcohol awareness program is designed to teach students about the effects of alcohol on their bodies and the risks associated with drinking.

The office has several resources available to students, including workshops, seminars, and informational materials.

The collaborative’s goals are to educate students about the dangers of alcohol abuse, promote awareness about the consequences of drinking, and encourage students to make informed decisions about their alcohol consumption.

The collaborative is open to all JCU students and is interested in hearing from anyone who is passionate about promoting awareness about alcohol abuse.

Farrakhan distorts good will of Washington D.C. march
diso M. Gratton

Commentary

November 19, 1995

It was in Washington D.C. on Monday, when Black entertainer and labor leader Louis Farrakhan led the Million Man March, that the word "distort" was first used to describe a Black march in America.

News Analysis

Despite the fact that Farrakhan has been in the news for the past few months, he continues to be a controversial figure.

The march was organized by Farrakhan's Nation of Islam, which has been criticized for its practices and beliefs.

Farrakhan's statements and actions have been met with both support and opposition.

WUCJ Program Director shares experiences

Rachael Hayes

How many of us can actually say that we have the opportunity to be on television? Not many of us probably, but Jeff Zuckaukas, the new Program Director at WUCJ, can. Zuckaukas recently hosted the Million Man March, and now he's sharing his experience with us.

Review

Zuckaukas started his career in television as a disc jockey, but his passion for radio led him to his current position.

Interview

Zuckaukas is excited about his new role and the opportunities it brings.

"It's a dream come true," he says. "I've always loved working in radio and being on television is just as exciting."
NATO may be headed if the Secretary General, Willy Brandt. Brach has been appointed a member of the American parliament in a conference on the war against terrorism.

NATO's head of staff, General Charles Haughey, has been accused of pressuring the government to release a report on the war against terrorism.

NATO is the most powerful military alliance in the world and its headquarters are in Brussels, Belgium.

Commentary

The report on the war against terrorism is expected to be released later this week. It is likely to contain controversial information about the role of NATO in the war against terrorism.

How many days has it been since you last watched a late night talk show? How many times have you tuned in to the Daily Show with Trevor Noah? How many times have you watched a YouTube video about the latest news?

It’s been a long time since anyone has asked me these questions. But, with the recent surge in late night talk shows and YouTube videos about current events, it seems like everyone is tuned in.

In an interview with WJJC, program director Rachael Hayes shared her experiences in the world of late night talk shows and YouTube videos.

Hayes has worked on numerous late night talk shows, including The Daily Show with Trevor Noah. She has also worked on YouTube videos about current events.

Hayes said that the experience of working on these shows is always challenging, but always exciting.

Hayes said that she enjoys being part of a team that is dedicated to bringing interesting and unique content to the airwaves and YouTube.

Hayes said that she looks forward to continuing her work in the world of late night talk shows and YouTube videos. She said that she hopes to continue to bring interesting and unique content to the airwaves and YouTube.

Art
The Cleveland Museum of Art bar is to sponsor Asian Autumn Exhibitions, with this year’s edition titled East by Ceramics from Korea and Japan, now through November 6. Highlights include Jennifer Louden, John Lee and Clare Fisher. Also featured is the Asian Arts Fair, the 38th annual gathering of fine Asian arts. The fair, directed by Wayne Wang and weaved by Paul Rosen, features more than 200 exhibitors and anys to receive admissions to the various special events offered by the museum, including lectures, classes, and workshops. Among the highlights are the annual lectures by members of the museum’s Asian art department, which provide an overview of the region’s history and culture. The museum is open Tuesday through Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $7 for adults, $5 for seniors and students with ID, and free for children 12 and under and those with valid EASIS cards.

Film
An apparent promotion presents Peter Ustinov with signature figure. The Cleveland Film Society and The International Film Festival of Cleveland present The Exterior on November 6. The film will be shown at 7 p.m. at the Cleveland Play House. Tickets are $9 per person and $7 for students and seniors.

Games
A promotional ad for a video game features a character wearing a black suit and holding a sword. The ad is part of a larger marketing campaign for the release of the game on the Nintendo Switch platform. The character is depicted in various poses, including running fast, jumping, and using a sword to attack an opponent.

“...it’s a natural progression that you want to give something back, and do as much as you can without being over企业itively political.”

Henry Moore, a British sculptor, is regarded as one of the most important British artists of the 20th century. His work is characterized by its simplicity and abstraction, and he is best known for his sculptures made of stone, bronze, and other materials. Moore’s work often explores themes of the human form, space, and time, and he is known for his use of geometric shapes and abstract forms.

A primary goal for Moore was to create works that are engaging and transgressive, yet accessible, and that challenge the viewer to think deeply about the nature of humanity. Moore’s work has been exhibited in galleries and museums around the world, and he is widely regarded as one of the most influential artists of the 20th century.

Volleyball: allies against Mt.; remains unbeaten in OAC play

The John Carroll volleyball team put away three games of the season Tuesday night. But Mount rattled off three points to lead the women’s cross country team.

“ar were having problems across the board,” said Coach Gregorich. “We’re not running well, we’re not hitting well, and we’re really focused on being instead of focusing on the game,” he said.

While preparing for the game against Mount, John Carroll practiced their plays and focused on running the offense smoothly.

While preparing for conference, the Mount Union women’s volleyball team worked on their passing and setting with several new players added to the roster.

Despite the challenges, the team was able to secure their unbeaten streak. The victory gave the team a boost as they prepare for upcoming games.

Chris Anderson was named the Defensive Player of the Week.

“Hoping for a good offensive night, we wanted to be competitive, but we did not have the chance to do much,” he said. “They’re a great team, but we did not score any points until the final two minutes of the game.”

Speak out...

The evidence is in the results.

In case you haven't noticed lately, prices in the Inn Between have been lowered. Students responded after prices were dramatically increased at the beginning of the year. The initial reaction by students was outrage and disinquietude with people talking of boycotts and other extreme measures. With careful thought and discussion, it was clear that students responded in a very intelligent, reasonable manner to the leadership of the Student Union and its petition campaign.

Because of this response, Dr. Wallace Tavolario of the SU met with Dan Yager, director of Marriott food services, and negotiated to bring the prices down. A trip to the Inn Between right now is proof positive that the negotiations were successful and that students really do have a voice on this campus.

The lowering of the food prices is a perfect example of what we do. It requires that we, as students, do have influential power. We possess the ability to make positive changes at JU, changes that directly affect us.

We, more than any administrator, know better than anyone else how to improve prices and services. A trip to the Inn Between, or the computer labs or the Marriott computer labs. Other labs on campus need to catch up, badly.

The Concrete Carpet of Morale is one of the league championships. How do we expect them to function properly? If we don't, we can't expect to compete in the Big East or the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Carroll, be it prices at the Inn Between that matters. It's the concrete carpet of morale. The current situation is similar to the car in the hands of a cop who hates students. You want to book the game, but the cop will try to slow you down. That's the concrete carpet of morale, the car in the hands of a cop who hates students.

The lowering of the food prices is a perfect illustration of the fact that we, as students, do have a voice on this campus. Marriott, be it prices at the Inn Between that need lowering or the fact that there is simply no money left on the student union card, changes that directly affect us.

We, more than any administrator, know better than anyone that it is not possible to do away with computers on this campus, but we still have the ability to get what we want. Students have the ability to get what they want, but that is only when they become active in their life on this campus.

The reasons for negotiation are varied, but one wonder if there isn't something more behind the negotiation process. What is going on in the halls of administration that is causing all of these changes in leadership? The Marriott has been notably different this year when it comes to price increases. Again, a trip to the Inn Between, but at what cost? We have been paying for a long time, and we still aren't satisfied.

What's going on in the SU?

Changes are being made on this campus, but students have little to do with the changes that are being made. How is the student voice heard in this year's SU?

In the Student Union Office of the Student Union, and the junior class as a whole. The junior class president, class secretary, and other representatives have all received various responsibilities.

As we have proven, we can make a difference. All we need to do is speak up. When we do the administration has no choice but to listen. We can make a difference, but we must be active in our life on this campus.
